It offers four bedrooms, two bathrooms and one reception room for now, but space to add much more within the existing building. With three large outbuildings and more than 11 acres of land, there is scope for a wide variety of activities here, e.g. tourism, equestrian, commercial... Two rooms on the ground floor arranged to provide a spacious living/dining room with wood burner and a pleasant and practical modern kitchen. The remaining four ground-floor rooms are currently unused and with a little imagination could provide an enormous amount of extra space. One of these unused rooms features a traditional brick bread oven and double-height ceiling!

Stairs from the kitchen lead up to the first floor, where a generous hallway gives access via an ancient-looking and solid wooden door to the upper part of the exterior space at the back of the building. Further, to a WC, shower room, two double bedrooms and an office/storage space. At the other end of this hall there is access through to another hall/corridor, again with a door to the rear of the house. From this hall, enter an enormous and well-appointed bathroom, a double bedroom and, at the end of the building, a bedroom so vast that it could become a studio flat in itself. These two sections of the upper floor are separated by a door.

The building is arranged such that many possibilities present themselves. For example, it could easily be subdivided into two self-contained dwellings. It could also become...
